WORKSTREAM 4
Supported self-evaluation
with emphasis on support, early intervention, prevention and trauma informed practice

MIVA – Moray's Inter-agency Vulnerable Adults process

► Enhancement of single agency protocols and encouraged proactive and collaborative decision making and support

► Monthly meetings with core group of professionals involved

► Does not replace existing established ASP processes

► Initially referrals only for Police – considering widening out

► Measuring impact of the process – we knew the project led to reduction in concerns

Methodology

- Supporting Evidence
- Staff Survey
- Record Reading
- Focus Groups
- Engaging with Adults
- Analysis of all evidence

Findings and reflections

- MIVA is a proactive and preventative workstream - we can state confidently that MIVA has supported a reduction in protective concerns for adults

- MIVA supports our Partnership to further embed professional curiosity and keeps discussion alive

- MIVA supports risk management and oversight

- Our IRDs and MIVA meetings are of excellent quality – they are always attended by Partners and take into account a holistic view of the adults' circumstances

- Our ASP documentation and investigative activity are undertaken with clear management oversight and are carried out to a high standard

Findings and reflections

- ► Naming conventions!

- ► Improved management oversight of screening activities and thresholds. Whilst mechanisms and structures are in place – they are not consistently followed

- ► Our approach to trauma was not consistent across all teams

- ► Capacity impacted practitioner availability to undertake training

Findings and reflections

- ► Allowed an opportunity to jointly assess and reflect on the positive work being undertaken locally

- ► Deeper understanding and appreciation of the roles of partners and colleagues

- ► Time intensive – our group was too small! We needed to involve more people from across our services – this was indicative of the Staff Survey also

- ► Not all of our practitioners could attend all of the sessions – leading to confusion

- ► Access
